

Respect Life

Dear newborn infants of the universe,

Hello and welcome to the world! When your parents read this letter to you, and as you open your eyes to the world, you will realize that everything around you is so beautifully made. These are all the wonderful creations of God.

The first thing you will see is your home, your parents, and your family. When you explore the things around you, you will see plants and animals. God all made them. God created plants as the first life on earth. Some of these plants grow food for people to eat. They give air to breathe. God created lovely animals to have more life on earth. God created Adam and Eve, the very first people like you and me. He told them to go out and multiply. When you grow up, you too will have your own children.

I hope you enjoy all His creations but always have respect and love for them too. Listen to your parents, love your neighbors and try not to make any sin. Don't crush or cut trees but plant seeds to grow new ones. Treat animals nicely. If you have them as pets, treat them the love and care they need.

God created these things to have wonderful life on earth. You have to treat everything and everyone well to make God stay happy and proud. Make life in this world be as pretty as can be for your babies so they can pass this to their own babies too.

"This is my letter that I wrote to all the babies before they open their eyes. I want them to learn about God, His creations, and how to respect life. Once they understand all this, they'll believe that God is so good." - A Fourth Grader