Gourmet Haitian Free Trade Coffee

SINGING Rooster provides direct assistance to coffee farming communities in Haiti for the sake of self-sustainability, dignity and economic autonomy.

We help farmers to cultivate and process rare, gourmet coffee. Then we buy/export tons of it at higher than fair trade prices and create new markets for it: roasted coffee, green coffee, fundraising with coffee, and wholesale coffee for roasters, cafes, stores, and nonprofits.

We return 100% of proceeds from coffee sales to coffee farming communities

We require co-ops to re-invest a portion of these proceeds towards projects where we offer matching grants and guided support.

We may be a nonprofit - but our goal is profit-driven: to help Haitians be economically autonomous through smart business practices, product improvement and strategic growth.

Haiti is a small place - about the size of Maryland. Plus, much of it is vertical.

Mountains aren't good for most agriculture, but they're IDEAL for coffee growing; coffee trees thrive in moist but well-drained soil at high altitudes. The higher the altitude, the bigger the bean, the better the coffee.

Because coffee trees are water-intensive, they do best growing in the shade. Fruit trees provide ideal canopies where fruit becomes additional food.
