2015!... It just seemed like yesterday when every-one was running around stockpiling food and worrying about "Y2K" and here we are 15 years later! How time flies. If you could go back what would you change? Now is the time to create those resolutions and stick to them. One of our 2015 resolutions is to continue providing our customers with interesting, valuable, and fun information through SECURITY NEWSLINE. We hope you enjoy this edition. Thank you to our customers for your business and our ProPartners for your continued referrals.

"TAP POCKETS & GLANCE BACK"

Always be aware of those important things on you or left behind you.

Have you ever accidentally left your keys, phone, or credit card on a restaurant table and walked out? What a disaster that could have been or was. Set up an "auto-pilot routine" to tap your pockets for your phone, keys, wallet, etc. whenever you leave any location. Get in the habit of glancing back to double check where you were. Force yourself to do this every time you change positions when out in public and you'll never have to worry.

Knowledge Base:

Surveillance Cameras:

Fixed Lens vs. Verifocal? Fixed lens cameras are the most popular cameras installed today. Most all fixed lens cameras have a wide angle view (ex. 2.8mm or 3.6mm). A fixed lens doesn't let you adjust the focal length, angle of view, and level of zoom. With a verifocal lens camera you can adjust the focal length, viewing angle and level of zoom. A major benefit of a verifocal lens camera is the ability to magnify an area greatly. But by magnifying the area you also reduce your wide viewing angle and area. You get a lot more detail for one area at the cost of losing a wide angle view. The cost of verifocal lens cameras can also be substantially more expensive than fixed, wide angle lens cameras.
