

ABC policy: don't question the warming theory

Andrew Bolt –, Monday, March, 26, 2012, (11:14am)

Global warming - propaganda

It is now official ABC policy not to question the global warming theory, even though the world hasn't warmed in a decade and scientists are in dispute. The ABC's Audience and Consumer Affairs branch writes in response to a complaint:

Given the overwhelming majority of the world's scientists agree that AGW is real and needs to be addressed and the overwhelming majority of the world's government's and the UN acknowledge the reality of AGW and the need to address it, the ABC pursues a balance that follows the weight of evidence on this issue. The ABC's coverage of this issue has well and truly moved on from the debate as to whether or not AGW is real.

What was it that former ABC Media Watch host David Marr once said? Oh, yes:

The natural culture of journalism is a kind of vaguely soft left inquiry, sceptical of authority. I mean, that's just the world out of which journalists come. If they don't come out of this world, they really can't be reporters. I mean, if you are not sceptical of authority – find another job. You know, just find another job.

Everything Marr wrote there is true. Except for just two words: "soft left". By Marr's own definition, the ABC's email proves the soft-left ABC has betrayed journalism.

It is now evangelising for a neo-religious movement.

(Thanks to reader Tony.)